Dear George,

[redacted] furnished me a brief report on your China trip last month and I was particularly struck with the apparent cordiality with which you were received. [redacted] report also indicates several areas where further contact and discussions with your hosts might prove fruitful. (Earlier I had read the transcript of your lively meeting with [redacted] and found it fascinating.)

With this in mind, I wonder if you would be kind enough to call my office the next time you're here in Washington. Perhaps we could get together for lunch and a chat.

Yours,
